The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 12-19 and 59-90 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. The computer model is not described with such specificity as to enable one of ordinary skill in the art to use the invention. For example, claim 12 recites that the computer model is used to determine one or more optimal locations in the combustion system for the injection of particles. However there is nothing in the specification which would teach one how the model is "used" to make such a determination, other than to state that the various computer programs (ATrAN, Chemkin, and FLUENT) are known in the prior art. The same is true for the "uses" of the computer models recited in the other claims. The block diagrams are not provided, other than to show that various parameters are fed into the prior art computer models. See MPEP 2106.01 and 2106.02.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 12-19, 76, 79, 82 and 86 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. Terms such as "desired level",

"determined" render the scope of the claims vague and indefinite. In claims 76 and 86, "include, but not limited to" is indefinite. In claim 79, "small enough", large enough" and "sufficient" are indefinite. In claim 82, "one or more of" is improper Markush terminology.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 12-19 and 59-90 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over applicants' admitted prior art. Applicants admit in Paragraphs [24] through [27] of the specification that the computer programs ATRAN, Chemkin and FLUENT are known to model combustion systems. It would be obvious to use these commercially available models for the purposes recited in applicants' claims, since the specificity disclosed in applicants' specification for using these computer models is no greater than that which is known from the prior art for modeling a combustion system. Applicants' argument, that a computer used to control and monitor a system is not equivalent to a computer model as recited in claim 12, is not convincing, since applicants have not explained how the computer model as recited in claims 12 is different from ATRAN, Chemkin and FLUENT.

Loving and Labbe are made of record for disclosing methods for controlling combustion systems to inhibit pollution.
